To me Choi Hong Hi, General and Founder of I.T.F. Taewkon-Do was very inspiring.
Inspiring people have: passion, inspiration, honesty and a positive attitude.
Countries that are inspiring in Taekwon-Do are: NTN Norway, ITF New Zealand and ITF Poland.

My main interest is ITF-Taekwon-Do. I find health, harmony and a passion for life in Taekwon-Do.
My aim is to pass this on to all people.
My instrument is to spread Taekwon-Do and train people on their Taekwon-Do-path.
My skills are: motivating people, building bridges, solving problems and taking decisions.

This booklet is a resume of my activities, decorated with pictures. Life goes fast and is a reflection of our experiences. It is very nice to have a remembrance for ourselves and our beloved ones.

The Tigers program

The Tigers program started as an idea back in 2002, which after five years of research and development was released in 2007 by Richard and Lucinda Cassidy.

Since its inception the Tigers mission has always been to provide the world's best life-skills education program for children, age 3 -6, teaching them how to stay as safe as possible in dangerous situations at home, school and play, not least how to deal with the pressures of growing up concerning bullying and peer pressures. In essence, and as the late great General Choi stated, our aim is to educate the young, to build great leaders of the future.

Our mission is to teach children a set of core life-style principles, which they learn through physical and emphatic understanding, so that the lessons learnt become a tangible part of their psyche. What they learn sticks with them for life. TheTigers courses are ground-breaking, changing the face of children's education on a global basis.

The business is now part of a company called: the "Cooperate Association Carilu Education Services Group", headquartered in The Netherlands, working on a long-term global growth succes.

CEO: Mr Richard Cassidy, England

CCO: Mrs Lucinda Cassidy, England

COO: Mr Harry van Schaik, Netherlands

ITF REFEREES: AN HONORABLE TASK

by Mr Harry van Schaik, V dan, The Netherlands

During the Presidency of Grand Master Tran, the ITF Board of Directors identified four facets of Taekwon-Do: as a sport, as a martial art, as a way of life, and as a tool for social development.

Since the first World Championships in Montreal 1974 the sport facet has been a great tool to develop the ITF organization, and to build a more peaceful world. Tournaments provide places to meet, socialize, challenge, be involved in the Taekwon-Do world, and involved with its practitioners, Masters and Grand Masters. As well as organizers and competitors, there is another group of people who dedicate their time, energy, effort, professionalism and knowledge to grow Taekwon-Do as a sport: referees.

General Choi Hong Hi, Father of Taekwon-Do, told me in Italy during the World Championships in 2001 that he was enthusiastic about growing competitions and bringing nations closer together. The ITF is blessed with professionally organized competitions as demonstrated by our World Championships and Continental Championships. Competition is the place where competitors can test their Taekwon-Do abilities, and under strict rules the best competitor will win. As well as benefiting competitors, who are guided by coaches and schools and supported by their countries, competition also gives audiences the opportunity to appreciate Taekwon-Do. Of course competitions cannot succeed without professional and motivated referees who adjudicate who wins and who loses.

Who are these referees?

Referees are selected and educated in several stages of their Taekwon-Do lives. World Championships referees must be highly qualified Taekwon-Do-in and experience is important to perform at the best of their abilities in highly tense events. As coloured belts and boosabum, referees learn the principles and gain experience at local, open, national, and international tournaments. These competitions are great places to learn and develop. At higher degrees they may perform at Continental Championships and World Championships, and all their skills are tested at these highest levels of competition.

Many referees are retired competitors who have performed at this level themselves, so they know what is required. Many referees are members of their countries' Umpire and Tournament Committees, dealing with rules and competition regularly. The ITF Umpire Committee is led by Masters who have a wealth of experience in dealing with competitions, they know all senior referees and their abilities from past competitions, and they guide referees for their future development.

To perform and excel, referees must possess:

1. complete knowledge of the rules and technical aspects of Taekwon-Do
2. motivation to be a referee
3. adequate physical condition.

Furthermore a referee must work at the highest moral level. Their values allow them to maintain:

1. the safety of competitors at all times
2. fairness of competition in all aspects
3. respect for all who are involved.

Working as a referee at the highest level of competition requires an attitude to:

1. strictly enforce the rules regardless of who is involved
2. communicate with people with various degrees, education and experience
3. behave independently of all parties to obtain the correct result.

My journey as a referee

For my career I was fortunate to join a school where competition was important. I trained under good teachers and passionate instructors. Kiet Tjon-A-Pauw, 5th degree, guided me on the steps of becoming an umpire. Mr Tjon-A-Pauw was presented an honorary award from ITF-Netherlands after over 30 years as a referee. I also trained with Master James Tjin-A-Ton, a top competitor in the
